Why we created this brand book.

This is a guide for how we communicate as an organization.

It’s a framework that allows us to articulate who Metro Vancouver is and what we want to achieve.

Consistent application of our brand helps our residents understand not just ‘what’ we do, but ‘why’ we do it.

SERVICES AND SOLUTIONS FOR A LIVABLE REGION

A significant gap between our goals and awareness level.

Only 55% of residents are aware of Metro Vancouver

2018
The good news

65% of residents are aware of the organization Metro Vancouver.

The not so good news

Only 28% of those can correctly name at least one area of responsibility.

Water planning and management and Regional Parks are the two areas that the public most associates with our organization.
It can be hard for people to understand that the organization that manages our liquid waste system also provides affordable housing.

But both are vital elements of a livable region.

Building awareness of the range of services Metro Vancouver provides helps residents understand the key building blocks of a livable region. It helps residents understand the link between policies and decisions enacted by their regional government to the things that have a direct impact on their lives.

Having our residents understand the ‘what’ and ‘why’ of our services makes it easier for Metro Vancouver to meet the goals and objectives of our Board Strategic Plan. When residents understand the ‘why’ of a decision they are more likely to support it. When they understand the ‘what’ of a construction project they are more likely to accept the interruption to their daily routine.

Our brand story is how we communicate who we are and what we do.
Metro Vancouver extends from Lions Bay to Langley, with 21 municipalities, one electoral area and one Treaty First Nation.

Our range of services has expanded to match the growth and complexity of our region, to ensure we can adapt to changing conditions, and to maintain the quality of life our residents expect.

We connect our 23 members so that we work as a federation. Together we provide the services and solutions that underlie a livable region.

Then

In 1886, Vancouver and Coquitlam Waterworks were founded.

The mission was clear: to find and deliver a good, reliable source of water for a growing population.

In 1887, the first sewer was built to carry away the region’s drain water.

So began a series of investments: clean potable water and safe management of liquid wastes.

Logo

Our logo is composed of three elements:

- Wordmark: metrovancouver
- Symbol: SERVICES AND SOLUTIONS FOR A LIVABLE REGION
- Tagline: SERVICES AND SOLUTIONS FOR A LIVABLE REGION

The first version of our current logo was created in 2005 when we were the Greater Vancouver Regional District. Since then, it has undergone a number of revisions.

The primary element of our branding is the wordmark. Our wordmark provides a simple, yet strong, visual symbol of our organization. It can be easily reversed and stands out in a cluttered visual environment.

The symbol depicts the land, air and water we work so hard to protect and enhance and reflects the corporate colours.

The symbol is always used in conjunction with our tagline. Together they are called the ‘tagline signature.’

Developing branded material will nearly always involve our design team. In cases where a logo needs to be used without design team input the ‘locked logo’ should be used.
Colour Palette

We have developed an extended colour palette that builds on our sub-brand colours. It offers a full spectrum of selected colours for use with the Metro Vancouver brand.

The ring, highlighted in white on the colour wheel, indicates the Sub-brand Core Palette. This set of colours, is “hue restricted” and will be used for identifying a specific service area. The other shades that are slightly darker or slightly lighter are considered “open use” as a secondary palette. Please inquire with the design team for more detailed information.

Brand Themes and Visual Hierarchy

Neutral Brand Theme

At the Corporate level our visual identity comprises our wordmark and tagline signature. Depending on the application these may appear as two separate elements on the page or as a single lockup.

The Corporate colour palette uses the blues and greens from our symbol.

Service Level Theme

In order to reflect the diversity of our work we have developed sub-branding for our services. Application of this sub-brand depends on the circumstances but will be evident in publications such as management plans. Generally for more public-oriented communications we will use the Metro Vancouver parent brand.

For the sub-brand the service area is incorporated into the wordmark as a header. Typically the tagline signature will appear as a separate element on the bottom of the publication. The decision to sub-brand a particular product will be made on a case-by-case basis and is decided as part of the External Relations Department approval process.
Campaigns

Campaigns incorporate the Metro Vancouver wordmark into the creative. The preferred location is upper-left corner and the wordmark can be used in black or reverse.

Campaign Posters

Social Media
PowerPoint Presentations

Every year Metro Vancouver creates hundreds of presentations on almost every aspect of our organization. These presentations play a big role in building an impression of our organization.

The PowerPoint template is designed to provide a consistent look and feel to presentations about Metro Vancouver services and solutions. It is updated on a regular basis with new corporate slides and refinements.

The template is in 16:9 format with a grey background and has been designed to work in a wide variety of conditions.

A collection of slide layouts and corporate slides come with the template. The base structure of the template allows for customization.

PowerPoints are developed by the presenter and then go through a review and, if necessary, a revision process by the External Relations Department design team. Requests for graphics should be made in advance of the PowerPoint review process; this includes adapting Excel graphs or spreadsheet data.
Photography

The framework for our visual identity rests upon a few standard elements that are displayed in a consistent manner across all our communications materials.

The logo.
The sub-brand.
The tagline.

These elements ensure that people can see that our various services are connected.

The diversity of our services is portrayed through photography. The photos we choose should reflect the dynamic, forward looking and vital characteristics of our organization.

As a general rule we avoid using stock photography. By stock photography we mean staged shots that are used to illustrate general concepts such as ‘people working together’ or ‘enthusiasm.’

Photographs used in our publications and presentations should be authentic and depict our services, our employees and our infrastructure.

Choose high-resolution photos that are well composed and professional but always choose authentic content over generic stock shots.

Whenever possible photographs should be labelled with, at minimum, the location and facility. There may be times when additional detail will provide important information and should be included.

For example:

• Belcarra Regional Park
• UV Treatment Unit, Coquitlam Water Treatment Plant

Don’t

Use generic photography that is too posed or trendy in tone.

Do

Use strong photos that illustrate our services or employees.
Tone of Voice

Tone of voice isn’t what we say but how we say it. It’s the language we use, the way we construct sentences, the sound of our words and the personality we communicate.

Metro Vancouver communicates across a wide range of mediums from social media posts to management plans. Each medium has its own unique demands and the tone of voice changes to fit.

Our tone of voice is inspired by our values, personality and brand essence. We speak with one tone of voice but may dial up and dial down certain attributes given the conversation and audience.

There are some key aspects to the tone of our communications that are constant.

We are:

clear - we define clear goals and get things done to a consistently high standard.

factual - we are an evidence-based organization that strives to be as accurate and informed as possible.

optimistic - we believe that we can find solutions to the challenges facing us as a region inclusive - we believe collaboration makes us stronger and makes our decisions better.

Personality

It may seem strange to think of an organization as having a personality but every major brand carries a set of associations that can be called their ‘personality.’ It can be useful to think of our personality as we develop different communications. There are three different aspects to the work we do that lead to three different personality types.

When we think about and plan for the future we are VISIONARIES

When we define clear goals and get things done to a consistently high standard, we are MAKERS

When we reflect and collaborate with others to generate ideas and solutions we are CONNECTORS
Places to apply tone of voice.

Each of the examples below employs a distinct tone of voice and they all share the same core values of clarity, optimism, accuracy and inclusivity. Consider your audience when choosing a tone of voice.

Publications
Formal, concise, detailed and as clear and easy to understand as possible.

Presentations
The PowerPoint template creates a standard for the organization and will help shape the visual aspect of your presentation. Your own personal style will shape your tone of voice. Remember to consider your audience.

Management Plans
Formal documents where the more visionary aspects of our personality comes through. Clarity of language is essential.

Social Media
A less formal, friendly tone of voice. Social media allows for more playful, enthusiastic language at times, but it is always accurate and informed.

Media Releases
Precise, straightforward language that connects actions to Metro Vancouver goals and objectives.
